

Oxford University Press

Speaking of Survival

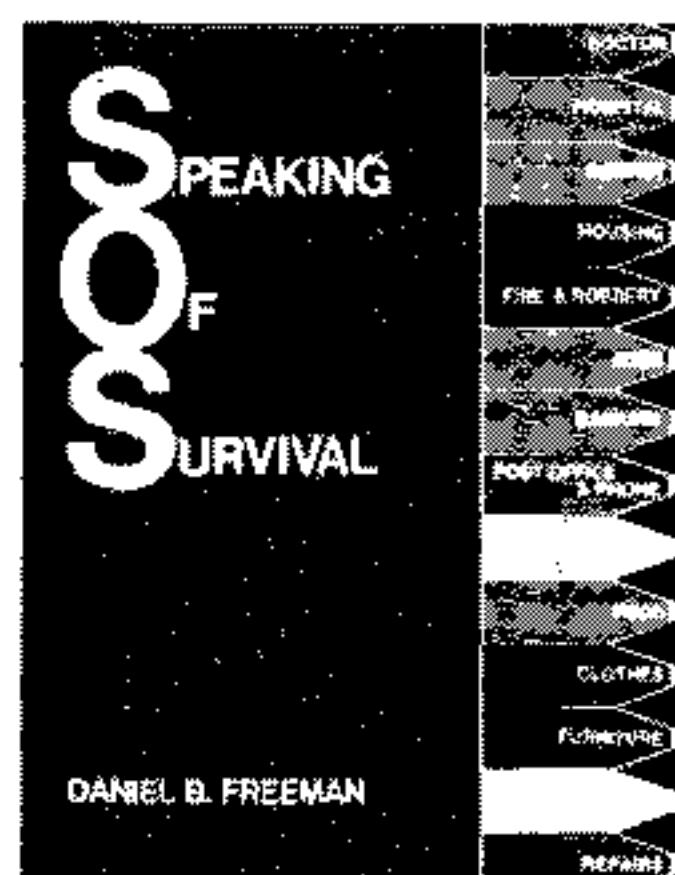

Daniel B. Freeman

Speaking of Survival is a high-beginner/low-intermediate course for adult newcomers to the U.S. S.O.S. makes conscious attempts to treat the student with dignity and to appeal to his cognitive competence, curiosity, and need for helpful information in the real-life situations he will be faced with. It teaches English, it teaches culture, and it provides practical detailed information on the basic survival situations.

Features

- Comprehensive coverage of basic survival situations
- Full-color contextualized vocabulary pictures
- Picture conversations
- Numerous oral exercises including role playing
- Informational readings for each survival situation
- Interesting discussion questions
- Small group and individual activities
- Homework/self-study section
- Practical guide of helpful information for ready reference
- Finger index on cover for easy location of each unit

Survival Skills with Dignity

Oxford University Press

200 Madison Avenue • New York, New York 10016