

Butler Joins ELI Staff at Laie

David C. Butler

Mr. David C. Butler, who holds a master's degree in linguistics from the University of Hawaii, has joined the English Language Institute at The Church College of Hawaii.

He attended Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, and then served two and a half years as a missionary in Korea for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. In 1963 he received a degree in Asian studies at BYU.

Mr. Butler's graduate work in Linguistics was done on a grant from the East West Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange at the University of Hawaii.

After spending a year of field study in Korea, he taught conversational English at Kyung-hee University and helped record tapes for their new language laboratory.

Mr. Butler will be on the staff of the TESL REPORTER and will teach courses in Linguistics and English as a Second Language at The Church College.